

Jacques-Émile
Blanche
Jane Roberts

GOURCUFF
GRADENIGO

JACQUES-ÉMILE BLANCHE

1861 - 1942

Jane Roberts

978-2-35340-129-1

Format: 21,5 x 28cm / portrait

Number of pages: 208

Illustrations: 200 approx.

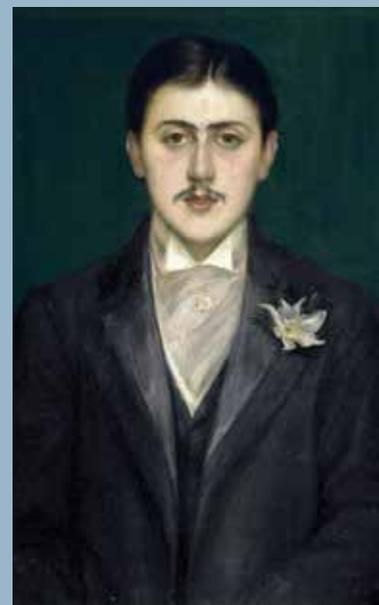

Hardback

170g matt laid paper

Price: 39 euros

Available in September 2012

French or English text

Jane Roberts is a British art historian, specializing in French 19th and 20th century painting.

"Within fifty years or so, museums will still show portraits that I painted of all my friends but of the artist who did these many portraits, there will be no trace in any book. I am perhaps the only painter of my generation about whom there is no monograph and whose name the Larousse dictionary still ignores".

When he wrote this prophetic lament in 1921, Jacques-Émile Blanche could hardly have guessed that nearly a century would pass before the publication of a monograph devoted to his paintings. Yet, this artist who rubbed shoulders with 'le tout Paris of the Belle Époque' but who was equally at home in upper-class Edwardian London, has never lost his popularity.

Blanche was not merely a celebrated painter in his own lifetime, but also a distinguished musician who played the piano 'divinely' and could read the most complex of scores, the author of over forty published books as well as a prolific journalist.

In fact, during his lifetime, these many talents laid Blanche open to harsh criticism not only from art critics, but also from his fellow artists and even friends, who accused him of being a jack-of-all-trades, of living a life of idleness thanks to his substantial private income, of being too clever for his own good, and, worst of all, of being too fashionable.

When Rouen Museum mounted an exhibition of Blanche's work in 1997, the first since the Second World War, the catalogue sold out within weeks. This book – the first monograph of his work to be published – is eagerly awaited not only by the general public, but also by private collectors and the art galleries and museums worldwide that possess examples of his work. This richly illustrated book aims especially to demonstrate the degree to which Jacques-Émile Blanche should be considered, alongside the likes of Helleu and Boldini, among the ranks of the great artists of the Belle Époque and the twenties and thirties.

JACQUES-ÉMILE BLANCHE (1861 - 1942)

Jane Roberts

Name, First Name

Delivery address

Phone

E-Mail

Price : 39 euros

Number of copies

PAYMENT

- by International telex transfer to HSBC LE RAINCY - IBAN : FR76 3005 6006 6006 6044 9738 409
- or directly through our website : www.gourcuff-gradenigo.com

PAPIER AND CO / GOURCUFF GRADENIGO - 8 rue des Lilas - 93100 Montreuil - France

Order Form
JACQUES-ÉMILE BLANCHE